THE STUDIO OF JOSEPH BEUYS, PHOTOGRAPHED FRITZ GETLINGER, 1959

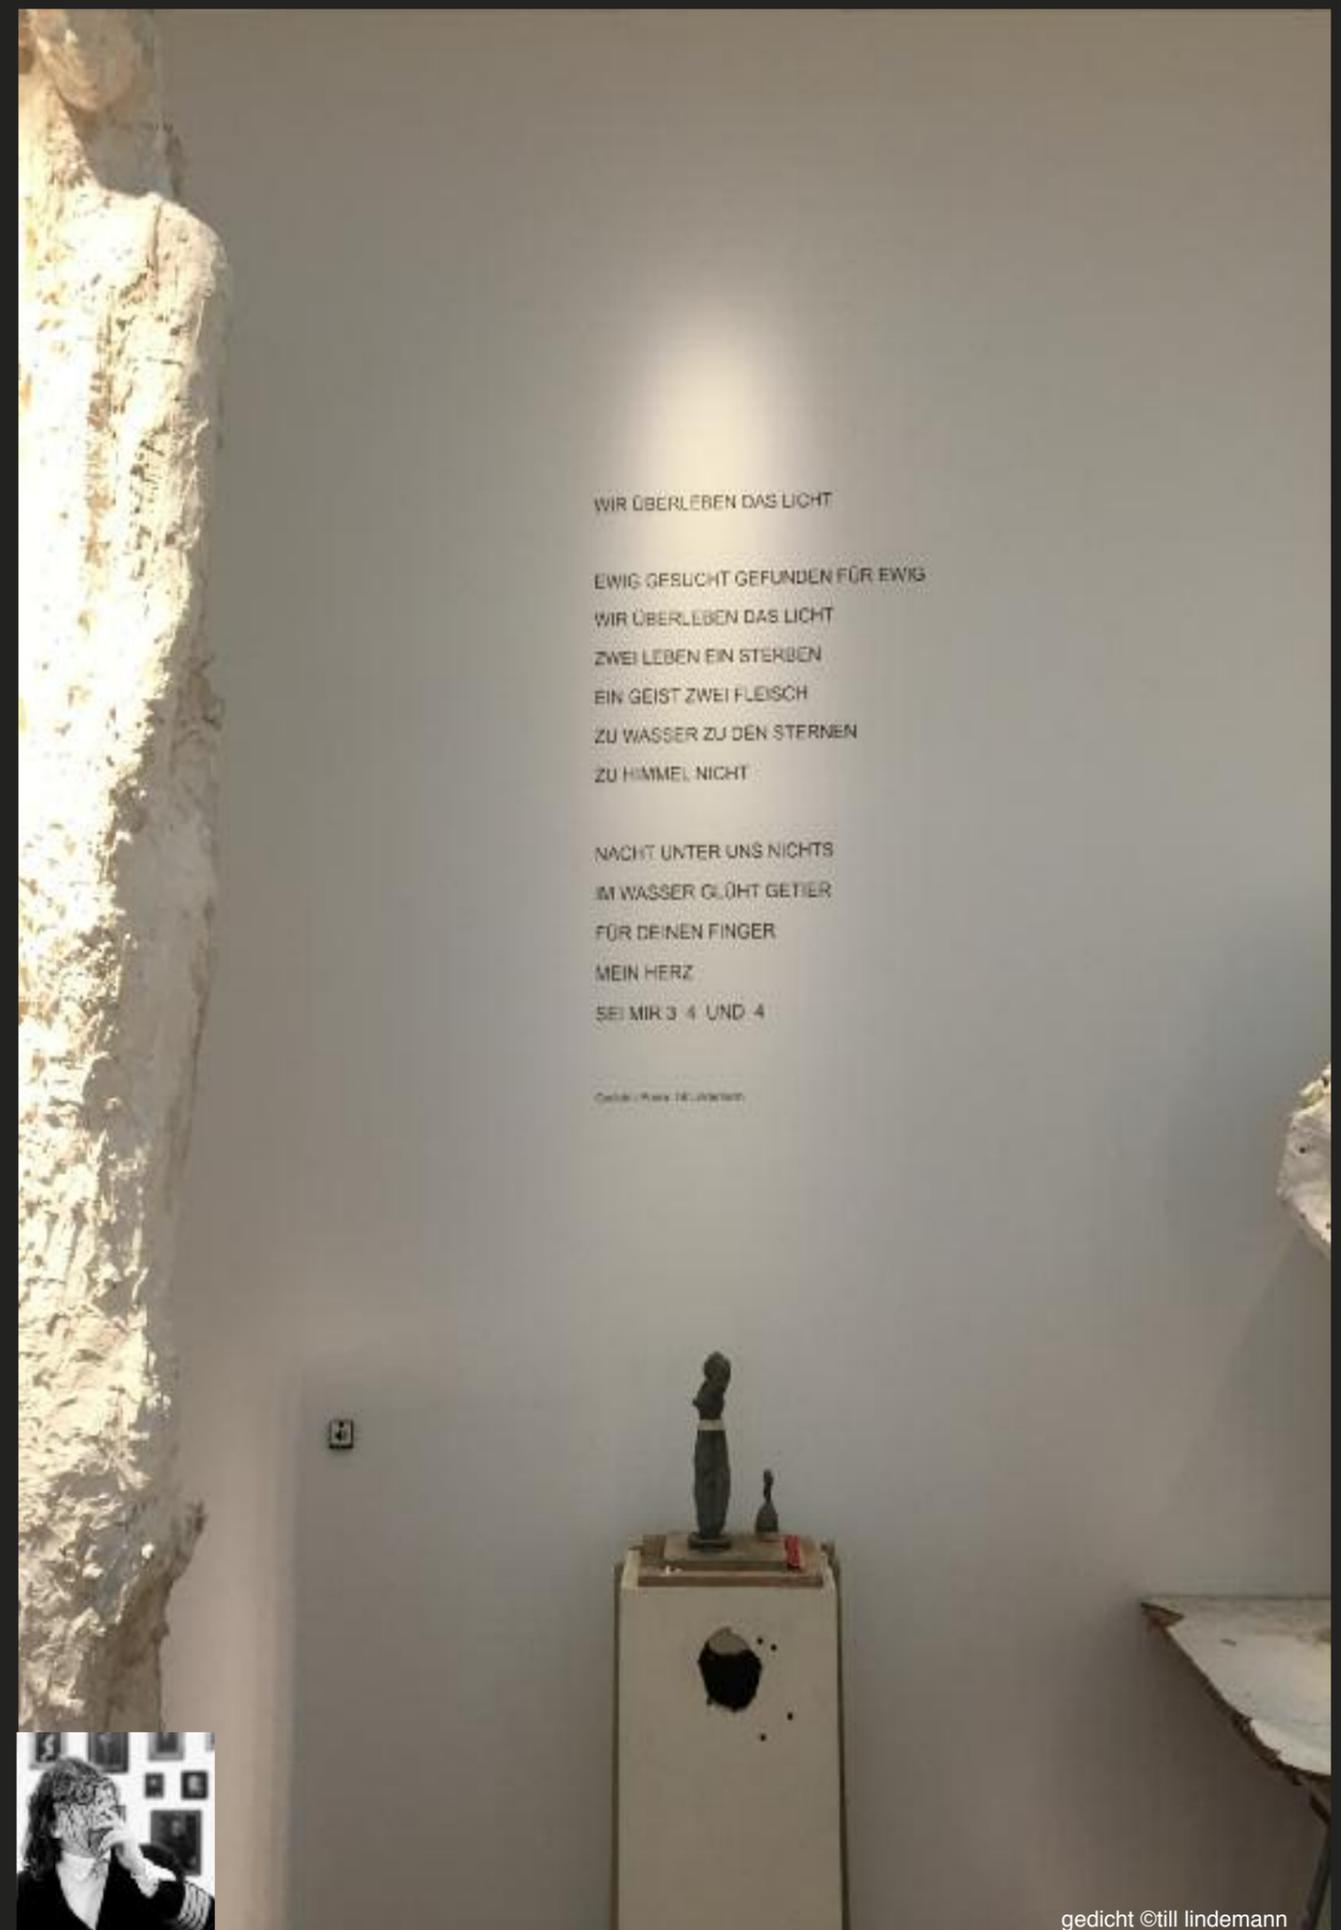

敬佛愛人 (Keibutsu aijin), 'Respect Buddha, Love people', by Yamada Mumon (Zen name Taishitsu), ca. 1930

The "Mark Twain Tree," a sequoia in General Grant National Park (now Kings Canyon), was cut down in 1891, so that slabs of its 16-foot diameter trunk could be displayed in New York and London museums. A similar giant was felled so that a 30-foot tall section, hollowed out to create a two-story house, could be shown at the 1893 Chicago World's Fair.

WIR ÜBERLEBEN DAS LICHT

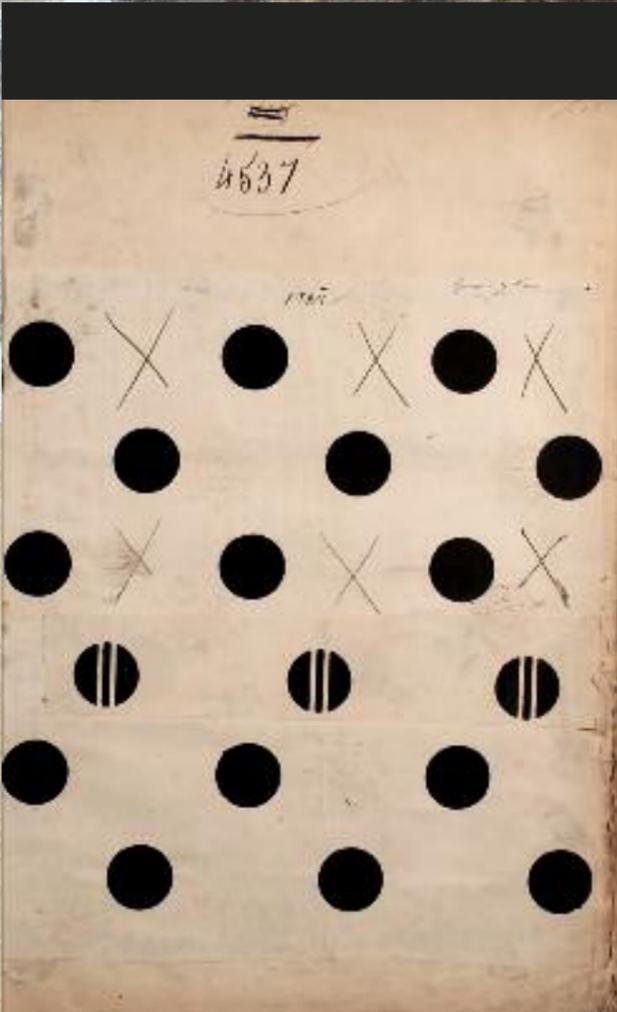

EWIG GESUCHT GEFUNDEN FÜR EWIG
 WIR ÜBERLEBEN DAS LICHT
 ZWEI LEBEN EIN STERBEN
 EIN GEIST ZWEI FLEISCH
 ZU WASSER ZU DEN STERNEN
 ZU HIMMEL NICHT

NACHT UNTER UNS NICHTS
 IM WASSER GLÜHT GETIER
 FÜR DEINEN FINGER
 MEIN HERZ
 SEI MIR 3 4 UND 4

Time                                    sparse                                    drumbeats, fragments,                                    and the                                    melody soaring                                    notes                                    melt                                    into the dark                                    woods                                    around me.                                    Then                                    the gone to liquid,                                    and the                                    sound broken apart                                    I am wave                                    a pulled energy                                    noise                                    heartbeat                                    slow, aching                                    drums,                                    and exploring                                    with the                                    fingers, for a moment                                    the split life away,                                    the world                                    gone rests                                    my life is my own.
 Then there is                                    pulling me                                    down into                                    the                                    branching off from My body                                    distant                                    and unused                                    a                                    world a                                    daria.                                    The girl whips the world flip

 I am wave

Ich

Außen bitterbunt

pechschwarz mein Geblüt

gelber Kuss

farblos meine Seele blüht

Das Rot bekommt der Morgentau

Und die Schenkel der Engel

Giftgrün für die See

für Tiere fettes tiefes Blau

Schwarz verschenk ich nie

Ich verteile Farben

die ich den Menschen stehle

saug die Coloren aus den Augen

und schmiere sie auf meine Seele

NIHIL PRIVATIVUM

Dabei handelt es sich um eine logische Entgegensetzung, die dem Negierten einen geringeren ontologischen Status zuweist: Dunkelheit ist nur die Abwesenheit von Licht, das Böse nur die Abwesenheit des Guten und so weiter.
